This technology brings together the core gameplay principles of FIFA and takes it to the next level. No longer are real-world players merely pulled from the crowd during gameplay, due to motion capture. Now the ball can actually move around based on where the player is on the pitch, creating more opportunities to be a spectator and not a part of the action, it creates a more realistic and intense experience. The use of the HyperMotion technology will not only improve the gameplay, but also make the brand new animations and player characteristics more realistic and authentic. The following are the first few features to be introduced with the HyperMotion technology: The HyperMotion Technology Experience: • Real-World Models • Real Player Actions • Realistic Player Controls • Authentic Player Traits • Brand New Physics • Artifacts Removed • Intuitive Gameplay and Controls Players will be able to physically react and adapt their behavior to changes in the ball, ball trajectory and action on the pitch. HyperMotion While in-game, the player will become the most important element of the game. The player will now be able to strategically manipulate his or her entire body and tackle like a real-world professional. With the HyperMotion feature, the ball will physically move with the player's body and react to his or her movements, creating the most realistic on-pitch experience ever in a sports video game. This hyper-realistic game engine created by a FIFA Pro World-class player will ensure the best possible experience in the best possible game. During gameplay, the player will be able to tackle with the controls designed for the real-life foot and changing momentum to adapt to the ball, as well as quick change of speed to reposition. New Core Attributes of the Players FIFA continues to set the standard for authenticity of player characteristics, with more than 40 new authentic attributes for real-world professional footballers.
